JUDGE COX, of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, being a republican and a partisan, decides in efect that the civil service law is a delusion and a snare, a humbug and a raud. The decision was in the case of John G. Woods, who was removed as superintendent of mails at Louisville, and who sought to restrain the postmaster general from making the removal. He says that the rules adopted by the president and the civil service commissioners are not such as the law authorizes and are therefore ultra entitled to no relief. The case will go to the supreme court, but the prospect is that Cox will be sustained. The decision has been watched with anxious hearts by the republicans, who are elated over it.

When Lincoln was a young lawyer practicing in Illinois it is said that he was once engaged in a case in which the lawyer on of the dry spell by having his crop of the other side made a voluble speech, full of wild statements to the jury. Lincoln opened his repty by saying:

"My friend who has just spoken to you would be all right if it were not for one thing, and I don't blame him for that for he can't help it. What I refer to is his reckess statements, without any ground truth. You have instances of this in his speech to you. Now, the reason of this lies in the constitution of his mind. The moment he begins to talk all the mental oper tions cease, and he is not responsible. He is, in fact, much like a little steamboat that I saw on the Sangaman river when I was engaged in boating there. This little steamer had a five-foot bollera nd a seven-foot whistle, and every time it whistled the engine stopped.
